

Meki Batu Union

Company Profile

Meki Batu Fruits and Vegetables Growers' Cooperative Union Ltd

Who we are

Meki Batu Union was founded on May 11, 2002, in Meki town, Oromia region, Ethiopia. It started with twelve primary cooperative societies and 527 members, 461 men and 66 women, spread across two districts, Dugda woreda and Adami Tulu Jido Kombolcha, near Dembal (Ziway) lake. The union began with an initial capital of 500,000 ETB.

It was first registered under cooperative proclamation No. 147/1994 (Ethiopian calendar), and later re-registered under federal proclamation No. 985/2009 and Oromia regional proclamation No. 218/2011.

Today the union brings together 135 primary cooperatives representing 8,089 member farmers, spread across six districts. Its own capital has grown to about 154.2 million ETB, and members now cultivate roughly 5,910 hectares of irrigated land. What started as a small group with a handful of staff has grown into an organization with 91 employees supporting its members.

Our vision

By 2032, we see a strong and competitive union that ensures sustainable benefits for its members and plays a leading role in the regional and national economy.

Our mission

The socio-economic development of our members comes from fulfilling the union's objectives: building community cohesion from the grassroots up to higher-level structures, strengthening self-confidence, and encouraging self-governance and mutual support, all aimed at securing lasting benefit for union members.

Our objectives

- Consolidate and sell members' produce to local and foreign markets
- Supply appropriate agricultural inputs to producers at fair prices, on time, and in the amounts needed
- Facilitate better access to credit services
- Collect and distribute market information to producers
- Provide mechanization and maintenance services
- Provide training and education
- Provide technical and advisory support to producers

How the union is organized

The General Assembly sits at the top of the union's structure, made up of representatives from every member cooperative. Two bodies answer directly to the Assembly: the Executive Committee, which oversees the union's operations between assembly meetings, and the Control Committee, which provides internal oversight.

Day-to-day leadership sits with the General Manager, supported by a Legal Officer, an Executive Secretary, an Internal Auditor, a senior officer for planning, monitoring and budget, and an ICT officer. Below the General Manager sits a Deputy Manager, who oversees four departments: Agriculture and Agricultural Input Supply, Marketing, Human Resource Management and General Service, and Finance and Purchase.
